At 46% below this is just within tolerance. Relatively low levels attributed to low level of market housing completions as provision of the former is significantly linked to the latter through Section 106 agreements

2011 completions = 157; 2017/18 completions = 138, so within tolerance (12% below 2011 level). This is a similar level to previous 2 years. The number of planning permissions granted in the last year or so give reason to be confident that completions will increase to above 2011 levels in 2018/19 and beyond.

Performance shown is based on the existing contractor's performance, measured against the new definition, which will go forward to the new contract. The new definition is intended to drive a step-change in void turnaround performance, and is intended to be rigorous..

% of customers satisfied with the level and quality of housing repairs works undertaken in their home

The decent homes non-decedency figure reflects primarily the effect of a backlog of electrical works, for which contracts have been placed. Electrical works count for 24% of total non-decedency. Only 5% of total non-decedency is attributable to other factors.
